Fund Review and Strategy

At the end of the reporting period, the Fund's portfolio comprised six unlisted debt investments bringing the AUM to GHS 443.2M, with a weighted average GHS yield of 16.1% and USD yield 9.4%; and a weighted average tenor of 4.5 years. Currency exposure shifted modestly toward the cedi, at GHS 83.3% versus USD 16.7%, compared to 78.5%/21.5% in July.

The Fund generated a year-to-date (YTD) return of 9.3%, although performance in August was negatively impacted by currency movements, including a 4% month-on-month currency appreciation. The portfolio remains well positioned to benefit from upward movements in yields particularly on its floating portfolio.

The Fund's investment pipeline remains robust, with capital available for deployment into quality opportunities. As several transactions near completion, the Fund is well-positioned to execute on these deals and drive overall portfolio performance. The Fund currently has open share subscriptions, offering an opportunity to raise additional capital for deployment into competitively priced opportunities as the rate environment evolves.

Market Overview

Inflation edged up from 4.6% in July to 5.0% in August, driven mainly by higher utility tariffs and energy prices amid ongoing geopolitical tensions in the Middle East. At the short end of the yield curve, rates declined as increased market liquidity, supported by government coupon payments, combined with a low-inflation environment. Meanwhile, the Cedi remained resilient, appreciating 3.8% month-on-month against the US dollar, supported by Bank of Ghana interventions aimed at meeting anticipated post-coupon demand for foreign currency.

Looking ahead, the macroeconomic outlook remains favourable, underpinned by currency stability, subdued inflation, and steady economic growth. However, volatility in global energy markets and upward pressure on domestic utility tariffs remain key near-term risks.
