Fund Review and Strategy

At the end of the reporting period, the Fund's AUM increased to GHS 490.1m from GHS 443.2m in August, reflecting strong investor participation and continued confidence in the strategy. The portfolio remained diversified across seven investments, delivering a weighted average yield of 15.6% on cedi assets and 11.1% on US dollar assets, with a weighted average tenor of 4.5 years. Currency allocation shifted modestly toward the cedi, with exposure of 87.9% GHS and 12.1% USD, compared to 83.3% and 16.7%, respectively, in the previous month. The Fund generated a YTD return of 11.2%, supported by high yielding exposures and gains from its foreign currency exposure amid continued US dollar strength against the cedi.

Subscriptions during the quarter contributed to the Fund's growth even as capital invested in near cash securities awaited deployment. While this moderated near-term returns, the additional liquidity strengthens the Fund's ability to capitalize on attractive investment opportunities. Following the completion of one transaction, the Fund expects to deploy additional capital in October, gaining exposure to the fast growing telecoms industry. Against a backdrop of sticky inflation and currency pressures, the portfolio remains well positioned to benefit from higher yields on its floating-rate assets while continuing to generate value from its USD exposure. The Fund also intends to gradually increase foreign currency allocation toward its strategic target, subject to attractive entry levels and prevailing market conditions.

Market Overview

With potential upside risks to inflation from energy prices and global supply-chain constraints, the MPC maintained the policy rate at 14.0% for the third consecutive time. Year-on-year inflation increased slightly by 20 basis points to 5.2% in September, driven mainly by non-food inflation, with locally produced goods contributing significantly. The short end of the yield curve declined marginally, supported by ample liquidity following coupon disbursements, while the longer end remained broadly stable. The cedi also depreciated by 4.1% during the month amid increased foreign-exchange demand and a broader strengthening of the US dollar. Despite the inflation and currency pressures, the economy remained strong, growing by 6.0% in the second quarter of 2026, with the positive growth expected to continue into the final quarter. Persisting inflationary and currency pressures signals tailwinds for sustained yield pick up on the market and enhanced returns for USD assets.
